Cary Tennis, United States, 2013. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 230 x 152 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . I was traveling across America, and then Europe, and then Russia, and then the Middle East, author Benjamin Wachs says of these 26 remarkable tales, waking up each morning not knowing which city I would fall asleep in. Cities became pieces of a jigsaw puzzle, connecting in ways that you could not see on a map, to reveal the secret order of the universe. While these fictional accounts had their visible beginnings in a freelance journalist's world travel, they had their inner beginnings in the fertile workings of a remarkable mind. My own sense of the author, watching him in my writing workshops in San Francisco week after week spin these remarkable, wry, otherworldly tales with the fluid ease of a savant, seemingly unaware of his own genius, is that he is doing something notable and unusual, and it is for that reason that we committed to publishing this book. Among the tales I am most fond of are Thanatos Cuisine, in which a chef creates dishes too hot to endure yet too delicious to turn down, and Feeding Time, about the choices a brilliant homeless outcast forces upon those who try to help him. Childhoods on Display in Boston evokes our cultural hunger for a neatly commodified past; finally, perhaps my personal favorite, Some of the Social Issues Surrounding Jazz, blows a sad eulogy for a great American art form that loses its roots in the street the more it is celebrated in the university. Almost all these tales originated in the San Francisco workshop, springing astonishing and fully formed in our living room, with that Benjamin Wachs aura of magical, unconscious coming-into-being, a...
