On the Continent-- Pirate and Three Cutters --Life of Lord Napier--Brussels--Lausanne-- Snarley Yow -- Pacha of Many Tales --Correspondence--Farewells party--Diary on the Continent --Letters to Mrs. Bury Palliser. In 1835, Captain Marryat, accompanied by his wife and children, left England, and proceeded to the capital of Belgium. In his own words, Not one day was our departure postponed; with post-horses and postillions, we posted, post-haste, to Brussels. During the month of his sojourn there, he visited Malines and Antwerp, and was invited to the receptions given at the Court of Leopold I. His political and general ideas of this country and Switzerland are to be found in his Diary on the Continent, a journal that now forms part of a collection of fugitive pieces in a book called Olla Podrida, and which was published in 1840. On the 26th of May of the same year, Captain Marryat left Brussels, and on the 10th of June arrived at Spa, having stayed a week at Liege en route. Although amongst his various talents, he possessed a- decided one for packing up clothes and putting babies to sleep, the fact of his carrying plenty of both incumbrances about with him, rather retarded the accomplishment of his journey. Like most sailors, he was very kind and tender-hearted with children, and especially so with his own little ones; and when at the close of the day s travelling they were tired and fractious, and refused...
