By JAMES DOUGLAS. Read before the American Philosophical Society April i, 18qs.) Among the most versatile men of science, of the present generation, must be classed Thomas Sterry Hunt. He was prominent as a chemist nearly half a century ago, not only in the field of original investigation, but as one of the first interpreters of the new chemistry then being taught by Gerhardt, and he not only grew with the growth of his favorite science up to the date of his death, but helped to enlarge its scope, to expand its relations, and place it on a new and more consistent basis. As a geologist his work was almost confined to the crystalline and palaeozoic rocks, not only because his practice in the field under Sir William Logan, in the Canadian Geological Survey, was among the older rocks,...
